

Think you can spot a Problem Gambler?

Don't bet on it.

With online and mobile gambling channels making it even easier to develop hidden gambling problems, it's good to know that police have somewhere to turn if they, their mate or anyone in their community needs a hand.

ASK

whether gambling is an issue

REFER

them to our free legal, financial and counselling services

FIND OUT

more at gamblinghelp.nsw.gov.au

ORDER

free brochures and posters for display at your work from legal.info@olgr.nsw.gov.au

When Gambling Goes Too Far

Australians love a punt. On average, Aussie gamblers spend more money per head than any other nationality, so it's not surprising we also have our share of problem gamblers.

Males, females, the elderly, youth, bank officers, general managers, real estate agents, accountants, carers and even police are at risk of taking their gambling too far.

Many problem gamblers might not realise they need help, but if they have financial difficulties and they gamble, the chances are high.

Free Assistance For Everyone

Free legal advice, counselling and financial counselling services are available throughout NSW for problem gamblers and their families, including police officers and offenders.

If you suspect a workmate, friend or anyone needs help because of problem gambling, then raise the issue with them.

Let them know professional, experienced, confidential and free Gambling Help is available

- online 24/7 at gamblinghelp.nsw.gov.au
- by phone 24/7 at 1800 858 858
- face to face

Free Legal Help

Gamblers in trouble with the law can contact the free Gambling Help legal service by emailing communitylegal@wesleymission.org.au or phoning (02) 9263 5577 during office hours.

Visit gamblinghelp.nsw.gov.au to find out more, including how to access tools and free face-to-face Gambling Help counsellors in most NSW communities.